

CONTRIBUTORS

Contributors

Stephanie Aboueid, MSc, RD is a registered dietitian and a health systems researcher pursuing her PhD in Public Health and Health Systems at the University of Waterloo. She worked in primary and tertiary healthcare settings where she provided nutrition care focused on chronic disease prevention and management.

Ivy Lynn Bourgeault, PhD, is a Professor in the School of Sociological and Anthropological Studies and the Gender, Diversity and the Profession Research Chair at the University of Ottawa. She leads the Canadian Health Workforce Network since 2011.

Kristen Burrows is a practicing Canadian certified Physician Assistant and the Assistant Dean for the McMaster Physician Assistant Education Program. She recently completed a PhD in Health Research Methodology at McMaster University, studying the integration of Physician Assistants in Ontario.

Madison Brydges is a PhD candidate in Health Studies at McMaster University and a paramedic in Ontario. Using a sociological lens, she studies the role of paramedics in healthcare.

Caroline Chamberland-Rowe is a PhD candidate in Health Systems Management at the University of Ottawa and a CIHR Health System Impact Fellow working with the Champlain Maternal Newborn Regional Program and the Maternity Care Theme Lead for the Canadian Health Workforce Network.

Karen Cohen, PhD, is a registered psychologist in Ontario and the Chief Executive Officer of the Canadian Psychological Association. She is a graduate of McGill University (B.A.) and the University of Windsor (M.A., Ph.D.). She completed a post-doctoral fellowship in rehabilitation psychology and neuropsychology at the Ottawa Rehabilitation Centre.

Christine Covell, RN, PhD was an Assistant Professor at the University of Alberta School of Nursing and a former CIHR Postdoctoral Fellow with the Canadian Health Workforce Network.

Chantal Demers, BSc, GDip, coordinated the Canadian Health Workforce Network (CHWN) and co-led its Governance and Regulation theme group. She has over a decade of experience in health workforce research, policy and practice.

Elizabeth M. Fitzpatrick, PhD, is a professor in Audiology and Speech-language Pathology at the University of Ottawa and Senior Scientist at the CHEO Research Institute. Prior to academia, she worked clinically for 20 years as an audiologist and auditory-verbal practitioner.

Sharon Fotheringham received her MSc at McGill in 1972 and worked in various hospital and school settings before completing her career as Director of Speech-Language Pathology and Standards with the national professional association Speech and Audiology Canada in 2011.

Brenda Gamble, PhD, is an Associate Professor in the Faculty of Health Sciences at Ontario Tech University, she started her career as a medical laboratory technologist. Research interest include allied health workers, interprofessional practice and education.

Isabelle Giroux, PhD, is a Registered Dietitian and Professional Home Economist. She is a Full Professor at the School of Nutrition Sciences and vice-dean academic, student and professional affairs at the at the Faculty of Health Sciences of the University of Ottawa.

Mark Given is a certified Medical Radiation Technologist in both radiological technology and MRI and the Canadian Association of Medical Radiation Technology Director of Professional Practice and Research, responsible for the development of Best Practice Guidelines, Advanced Practice Initiatives and Leadership Development.

Brian Glebezon, DC, BA, MHSc, PhD (candidate) is a faculty member of the Canadian Chiropractic Memorial College since 1994, teaching technique, clinical education, healthy ageing, and jurisprudence. He served on the College of Chiropractors of Ontario (CCO) between 2007 and 2016 and to the Ontario Chiropractic Association in 2016.

Lindsay Hedden, PhD is an Assistant Professor in the Faculty of Health Sciences at Simon Fraser University and the Assistant Scientific Director of the BC Academic Health Science Network. Her research focuses on primary care accessibility and workforce planning.

Billie Jane Hermosura is a registered dietitian and PhD candidate at the University of Ottawa. Her research focuses on competency-based education, in particular leadership development in the health professions.

Yvonne James, M.A., is a PhD candidate at the University of Ottawa in the Institute of Feminist and Gender Studies. Yvonne has undertaken a number of research projects on oral healthcare workforce issues, particularly through a gender lens.

Ian W. Jones, MPAS, PA-C, CCPA, and DFAAPA is an Assistant Professor and Program Director of the University of Manitoba Master of Physician Assistant Studies with experience as a Critical Care Paramedic and as a Canadian and American PA.

Christine Kelly, PhD, is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Community Health Sciences and a research affiliate with the Centre on Aging at the University of Manitoba.

Josée Lagacé, PhD, is presently Associate Professor at the University of Ottawa where her research activities focus on speech perception in noise. Through her teaching and mentorship, Josée enjoys inspiring students entering the professions of Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology.

Karen Lawford, RM, AM, PhD, is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Gender Studies at Queen's University. She is a Registered midwife (Ontario) and an Aboriginal midwife (Lac Seul First Nation, Treaty 3).

Myuri Manogaran, PhD, is a Policy Analyst with the Health Care Systems Division at Health Canada. She is an Instructor at the University of Ottawa and Visiting Researcher at the Ontario Tech University.

Emily McMorris, MPH, is an alumnus of the University of Ottawa Interdisciplinary School of Health Sciences. She went on to the Master of Public Health program at the University of Toronto and now works in local public health.

Raha Mirshahi, is a Master's candidate at the University of Ottawa's Graduate School of Public and International Affairs and a Research Associate with the Canadian Health Workforce Network. Raha has received her Honours BSoSc Degree in International Studies and Modern Languages from the University of Ottawa.

Elena Neiterman, PhD, is a Continuing Lecturer and a Teaching Fellow at the School of Public Health and Health Systems at the University of Waterloo.

Sarah L. Newell, PhD, is an interdisciplinary health researcher who currently holds a postdoctoral research fellowship at the University of Ottawa Department of Geography, Environment and Geomatics.

Sameer Ratti, MA, MSc is an occupational therapist currently working in Victoria BC, supporting adults living with chronic pain. He additionally holds an MA in Linguistics, with an interest in communication science and disorders.

Shamel Rolle Sands, RN, is a Bahamian registered nurse, nurse educator and certified manager, currently pursuing a PhD in nursing. Her thesis research focuses on health workforce issues in The Bahamas.

Emily Rowland MSc, BScN (c) (PhD (c) is a doctoral and nursing student at the Dalla Lana School of Public Health and the Bloomberg School of Nursing at the University of Toronto.

Sara Torres, PhD, is an Assistant Professor at the School of Social Work, Laurentian University. She has over 17 years of experience conducting research and outreach with multicultural and hard-to-reach populations.

Meredith Vanstone, PhD, is Associate Professor in the Department of Family Medicine at McMaster University, and a member of McMaster's Centre for Health Economics and Policy Analysis.

Michael C Vout DD, has represented the Denturist Profession, Provincially, Nationally and Internationally, most notably as the President of The Denturist Association of Canada from 2008-2014. Michael is currently the Representative for The DAC on the Commission on Accreditation for Denturism, is on the Editorial Board for the IFD and is on The DAC/NIHB Technical Working Group.